Air pollution is the primary cause of numerous health problems all over the world. In order to evaluate and identify the urban atmospheric pollution in urban areas, measurements of different pollutants, particulate matter, ozone, NOx, CO, SO(2), PM10 and PM2.5, were carried out every hour from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. on November 3 and 4, 2002. A network of ten stationary monitoring stations was established over the city in order to measure the pollutants in different parts of the city. Particulate matter, measured on the Turin site, were similar to those in cities in the Northern hemisphere, while O(3) levels were higher and CO lower compared with European cities. NOx and SO(2) levels were close to those of the Eastern hemisphere, with the highest values along the PO(3)PS river and in the
