He asked me to get him the codified version of the Torah from the Likud Party. It sounded like a good idea to me. So I ordered it. Last week, I received an email from a rabbi in Stamford, Connecticut, a client of mine. He wanted to get the codified version of the Torah from the Likud Party. "Please." So, I sent him the same codified version of the Torah that I received. The difference is, I haven't ordered it. Funny, but not that unusual. When I was editing the very first article I ever wrote at the Jewish Telegraphic Agency back in the late 1980s, I had the same problem. I knew it was a bad idea, but I needed it to write the article. So I ordered it. Also, being a good Jew, I did not buy the codified version of the Torah from the Likud Party. My cousin got it from the Likud Party. In case you are wondering, Rabbi Francis Stroble, the head of Kehillath Israel Congregation in Stamford, and his congregation do not share a sense of humor like I do. Their sense of humor is so bad that I don't even want to use their name because I'm worried about repercussions. So, the rabbi asked me, "Do you mind if we just substitute someone else's name for yours?"
