It took a mother's frantic 911 call to 911 to save her son on Tuesday morning. After she called, she heard gunfire at the house at 1434 Piney Creek Road in the town of Walls, Mississippi. "I thought it might be a game, or something. I didn't think it was real life," Shinae Norris, the 9-year-old's mother, said at a news conference. "I heard a pop, and I was like, 'Oh my God.'" Other shots rang out, and the mother and her son ran out of the house. The boy was hit once in the chest, and the bullet exited his back, said Gilda Davidson, the chief administrator of the Madison County Sheriff's Department. "He was like, 'Papa!' a passerby said as she saw the boy taken to a vehicle by a family member. "He said, 'Papa, Papa, Papa.' I felt like he said it to me first." The mother tried to get help for the boy, who was taken to a local hospital. He was declared dead. "My family is hurting, my son was supposed to wake up on Christmas day," Norris said. She said that her son had been teasing a 12-year-old neighbor the night before, and the 12-year-old had taken his father's handgun and showed Norris how to shoot it. Norris said the boy had accidentally shot himself in the leg with the gun in the kitchen. "It's just the way it goes sometimes," Norris said. The boy's father, Curtis Norris, said his son was "softhearted." "I didn't raise no fool," Norris said. "I wasn't 'n' at him for playing with a gun, I was 'n' at him for playing with a gun." Curtis Norris said he thought that the boy had been outside Deserializing a linked list into a vector C++ (I couldn't find any related help) I've been on this for hours and I don't know what I'm doing wrong. Basically, here's the deal: I need to write a function that takes a vector of some random data objects as an input and returns a vector of another type of data object as an output. My first issue was that I don't know how to properly get the vector of this second data type into my function. Here's what I have so far: This is how I'm deserializing the first data type into the vector and how I would like to have it but I'm not quite sure how to do it (I'm just assuming all the necessary stuff in order to properly use the serialization). Note that X, Y and Z are some arbitrary data-type objects. Code:

    this->data = {std::istream_iterator>(in),
                std::istream_iterator>(in),
                std::istream_iterator>(in)};

Of course this is wrong but I don't know how to do it correctly (I also tried using `std::copy_n` but I'd have to make my vector over `10x10` to hold all the data objects and I'm not at all sure I'll be able to do that). My next issue is that I need to read a vector of objects of the second data type and I can't figure out how to do this either. (And the fact that the functions I've used so far in C++ don't seem to work as expected makes me think I'm doing something wrong here as well). A: If you are going to use `auto` then you don't need the tag `auto data =`

{std::istream_iterator>(in),
  std::istream_iterator>(in),
std::istream_iterator>(in)}; Assuming you have your data in the above vector std::vector
