Of the most exciting new features introduced is free player movement, which allows movement of players under any simulation pressure. FIFA 22 also includes new goal celebrations and a new power meter that displays the number of shots on goal from a single player. These additions, along with a host of other gameplay features, will be detailed in the Patch Notes below. FIFA 22 introduces a new unified player movement system, which will allow players to move freely in any direction at any time during a simulation. Players will no longer need to rely on the original game's movement system, which restricted players to facing directly in front of them while running, or to swap back and forth between the original and new movement systems depending on where they're being tackled. Players can now combine Sprints, Accelerations, Sprinters and Slide Dashes at any time, meaning that players should be able to move fluidly through gameplay, rather than having to rely on a predictable pace or direction. Goalkeepers have been changed, making them able to slide across the goal line, with direction and angle determined by the angle of their deceleration. This should improve defensive work rate for goalkeepers and help improve their quality of saves. Face of the club mechanics have been adjusted to allow club managers to choose from their kits or goals, more effectively tailor match-ups and increase the number of specific team roles. The addition of the new Pass Skill animation system to help increase more detailed ball passing and goal scoring. Teams can now build up to a quick, sharp and accurate shot on goal by choosing specific types of passes. "We've been very impressed with how players have told us that we have created an incredibly realistic experience for them," said Peter Moore, CEO at EA Sports. "That said, the real challenge was finding a way to add more excitement to the game without increasing complexity or increasing game-time. We hope these additions will enhance the experience by giving you even more tools to truly become a Football Manager." "Real" Player Data FIFA 22 includes brand new, realistic physics and animations for all 22 real-life players at once. New player movement systems and animation protocols have been designed around the data collected from these players through a complete, high-intensity football match in motion capture suits. More than 500 years of motion capture data have been analysed, combined with the specific, real-life
