Maladolescenza is a 1977 film about a young male protagonist in contemporary Vienna, who has lost his initial will to live, and acts instead as though his life is going to follow an inevitable path. The film is based on the novel of the same name by Austrian author Gert Heinrich Mann (born 1933) and was originally subtitled Ein Film mit Variationen, meaning a film with variations. Plot summary Fabrizio (Martin Loeb) is a likable young man who is deep in love with his girlfriend Laura (Eva Ionesco) and works as a soda vendor at a local ice-cream parlor. He lives in an old apartment building that has a new employee, Klara (Silvia). When they all move in together, the other tenants start to gang up against them, especially when they learn that Laura has a boyfriend named Martin (Fabrizio's brother). One of the tenants, Tommy (Pier Giuseppe Murgia), is a talented, but rough-hewn artist. The group meets at a local disco called Kalbfrauen at night. Tommy, Fabrizio and Fabri's friend Paul, are all in love with Zita (Eva Ionesco), a beautiful young woman who becomes enamored of Tommy. Fabrizio and Tommy hatch a plan to be sick one day, thus gaining permission to leave work. Laura, too, is feeling down, so she and Fabrizio plan to find a nice place to go d0c515b9f4
