For this, I need to create a new security group with the same name and parameters as the previous security group. Usually, to have the same IP range for all my instances, I use a parameter called instance-group-list and I use the following syntax: `aws rds modify-db-instance --db-instance-identifier $instance_identifier --instance-group-identifier $group_id --instance-group-list $GROUP_LIST_ARG --tags $tags --query 'DBInstances[].Endpoint' --output text` So, to be able to change the unique identifier for a copy, I had to generate a new instance-group-list and give it the unique identifier on this new instance-group-list: `aws rds modify-db-instance --db-instance-identifier $instance_identifier --instance-group-identifier $group_id --instance-group-list $GROUP_LIST_ARG --tags $tags --query 'DBInstances[].Endpoint' --output text` My question is: is this the best practice to copy RDS instances or am I missing something?
