Q: Upsert a record in a Non-Key Field I have a reference field in my table say customer_ref.

Note: I want to maintain order. If I insert a record like this: new_record: 1 customer_ref: a1 I want that if I try to delete the record, it should rollback as it is because if we think of the order, nothing has been changed on the server. I have kept the value of customer_ref as a non key field. Should I use REPLACE

INTO? Thanks in advance for any response. A: Yes, REPLACE INTO is a good idea REPLACE INTO table_name (col_name, column_name, etc) VALUES (new_column_value, new_column_name, etc) As You mentioned in your question the table has a non-key field then it will result to full refresh. REPLACE INTO is for CRUD. If you change any field in your table then it will update all. Many businesses are suffering as a result of the coronavirus crisis. Although online shopping has helped to create a sense of normality, many people are reluctant to spend money in times of economic difficulty. Technology, however, has the ability to make shopping an online experience that keeps customers happy. Chatbots can help businesses make this happen. Businesses could create special messaging channels for chatbots to interact with customers about orders. With some basic understanding of these conversational services, businesses can be part of the solution. This is the second part of a two-part article. Read part one here. What are chatbots? Chatbots are a software program that imitates natural conversation with a human. They are programs that are able to answer basic questions such as ‘What is your name?’ or
