A former child star is accusing "Rain Man" director and producer Gary Marshall of sexual harassment, abuse and intimidation. The woman, known only as "Jane Doe" to protect her identity, claims she met Marshall in the 1980s when she was 14 years old, and they became sexually intimate. "My experience with Gary Marshall was not a pleasant one, and it will forever be seared in my memory," she said in a statement to Variety. "Every time I saw Gary Marshall, I was reminded of my 14-year-old self being preyed upon by a man that was several years older than I was." Marshall, who died in 2015, was married to actress Jill Clayburgh from 1979 to 1985. The "Happy Days" director was also known for his work in TV, including starring in "Happy Days" and "Laverne and Shirley." The woman said she was fired from a film Marshall was making with Warner Bros. in 1984 because she had a curfew violation. She said he insisted she stay at his home instead of returning home as they had agreed. After several hours of ignoring her requests to leave, she said she was raped. The woman said she reported the incident to the LAPD, but the LAPD didn't launch an investigation because of the lapse in time. She said she called Marshall's office hours after the rape and was allegedly told he had left the country. She said she eventually quit the industry. The woman also said that Marshall allegedly lost a tooth while trying to punch her during an argument. She said she regretted working for Marshall because she says he sexually harassed her and gave her drugs while they were on location. She said she was hired to do a cameo in "Rain Man" because of the movie "Happy Days" but didn't receive any payment. She said her last day on set was Nov. 11, 1988. She said she wanted to file a police report after reading an article about #MeToo, but when she went to a police station her claim was ignored. "People have been afraid to talk about it for years because they were afraid of not being believed," she said. Marshall's representative didn't immediately respond to Variety's request for comment. Marshall was married to Clayburgh

Effect of a closed system of sevoflurane delivery on the time to extubation in children: A randomized controlled trial. A closed system of sevoflurane delivery has been developed for pediatric use, but its clinical value in children remains unclear. The purpose of this study was to compare the time to extubation using a closed system with the conventional open system. This is a prospective, randomized, controlled study. Fifty-five children, aged 3-5 years, requiring general anesthesia and scheduled for elective hernia repair, were included. The children were randomly allocated to two groups, the closed or the open system. The trachea was intubated at 6 min after the induction of anesthesia. The time to extubation was measured using a timer. Time to extubation in the closed system was significantly shorter ( $65.7 \pm 15.9$  min) than in the open system ( $94.3 \pm 29.2$  min) (P Pregnant Crystal Meth Users: Neonatal Drug Exposure and Psychosocial and Psychometric Factors. Methamphetamine (METH) exposure during pregnancy is associated with a wide range of birth defects. Recent epidemiologic research has suggested that neonatal METH exposure is associated with a broad range of short-term consequences in neonates and infants, including cognitive, behavioral and affective dysregulation. As METH use has increased in the general population, neonatal outcomes of pregnancy in women using METH during pregnancy have received increasing attention. Recent data indicate that, among pregnant women who use METH, a substantial percentage do so during their second and third trimester and that they are at risk for METH relapse during the postpartum period, which may pose further risk for adverse neonatal outcomes. The purpose of this study was to assess the neurodevelopmental outcomes of current and past METH use in pregnancy on children up to 18 months of age and to determine whether effects vary by child gender, child age, and maternal drug use during pregnancy. Seventy-five women who used METH during pregnancy participated in the current study and were compared to 45 women who did not use METH during pregnancy. Measures included the Neonatal Outcomes Screener, the ABC attention task,
